Dok se u različitim umjetnostima, prvenstveno likovnoj i književnosti, nametnuo ideal napuštanja metafizičkog idealja, umjetnosti poput performansa, kazališta ili glazbe podložne su patosu egzistencije. Jedan od mojih radnih uvjeta jest, međutim, lakoća stvaranja. Naravno da i komponiranje mora ispunjavati kriterije umjetničkog djela: mora govoriti samo za sebe, mora se držati svojih vlastitih pravila i naći ona koja će uopće biti prihvatljiva. Najveća radost u izradi partiture za mene nije potraga za jedinstvenim zvukom, koncentracija na nutrinu kako bih došao do vanjštine. Naravno da to jest prekrasno iskustvo, ali je isto tako na sjeveru hladno. Ja sam radije u toploj sobi i ne trebam tišinu i samoću kako bih čuo samoga sebe. Tako nastaje želja za nepokretnom i pretjeranom perfekcijom, a to je strah od praznine. Ja želim drugu, jednostavniju vrstu radosti, veselja muzičiranja. Bio sam presretan što sam doživio sjajnu praizvedbu Cirkusa u bečkom Jugendstiltheateru. Gotovo nigdje u partituri nije bilo uputa o izvedbi i oznaka dinamike. Usprkos tome sviralo se precizno i srčano, glazbenicima se notni tekst činio razumljiv. To sam želio postići. Središte mojih zvučnih predodžbi jest ljudski glas. Moj je cilj proniknuti u njega i granice i rubove njegove otpornosti. Ekspresivnost svake druge boje zvuka proizlazi u konačnici iz tog polazišta. Formu shvaćam kao preduvjet mogućnosti komunikacije i razumijevanja - dvostruko mi je važna jer me namjerni afektivni utjecaj na slušatelja ne zanima.

Temeljnih principa melodije, harmonije, ritma spremam sam se odreći tek kad su iscrpljeni. Nisam u potrazi za neizrecivim, naprotiv, zahvalan sam na već izrečenom na koje se rado nastavljam. Ne želim novi jezik. Važno mi je da unutar nekog jezika imam što reći. A ako krene posebno

While in different art forms, primarily literature and visual arts, an idea of leaving the metaphysical ideal behind was imposed, other art forms such as performance, theatre or music are subjects to the pathos of existence.

One of my working conditions however, is the lightness of creation. Composing of course needs to fulfil the criteria of a work of art: it needs to speak for itself, it needs to abide by its own rules and eventually find the rules it finds acceptable.

The greatest joy that comes from creating a score for me is not in the search for that unique sound, nor concentrating on the inside in order to surface on the outside. Such experience is by all means beautiful, but North is also very cold. I rather prefer to be in a warm room not aching for silence or solitude in order to be able to hear myself. This is how a desire for immovable and exaggerated perfection is created, identifying with the fear of emptiness. I want this other, simpler type of joy, the joy of making music. I was overjoyed for having experienced an excellent premiere of Circus in Vienna Jugendstiltheater. The score contained almost none of the playing directions or tempo markings. Despite of that the music was played heartily and precisely, and the musicians made it seem like the music written was completely intelligible. This is what I tried to achieve.

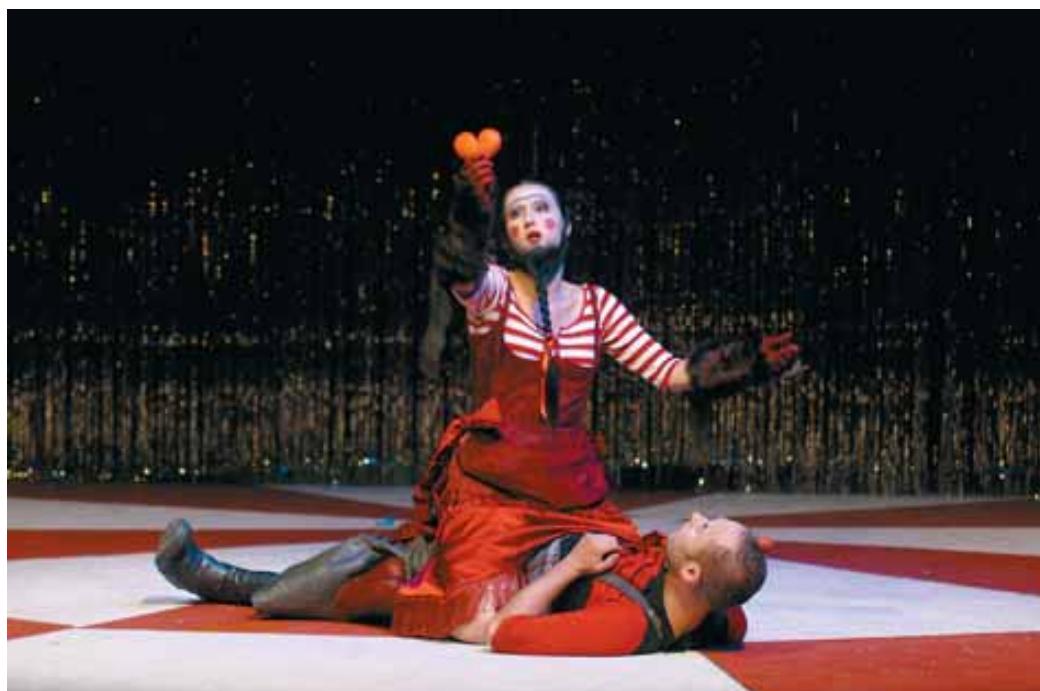

The centre of my sound images is the human voice. My goal is to penetrate into it and its boundaries and edges of its resilience. The expressiveness of every other colour of sound eventually comes from that very starting point. I see the form as a precondition to the possibility of communication and understanding - I find it double important because I do not care about the intended, affective impact it has on the listener.

dobro, čak i s humorom. Čovjek se mora izložiti shvatljivosti. Dobro je biti provjerljiv. Prostor glazbe je utopija. Ona se međutim događa samo u uprizorenju - jezik je poveznica ovoga ovdje i onoga tamo. To je uvjet za to da ne postoji jaz između umjetnosti i života. Umjetnost je dio života, jedan od najljepših, "nutarnje cvjetanje" (Schwertsik). Ali ne život sam. I ne zamjena za njega. [Jury Everhartz]

I am ready to give up on the basic principles of melody, harmony, rhythm only when they are completely used-up. I don't search for the unutterable, on the contrary, I am grateful for the uttered and I gladly complement it. I don't want to create a new language, and I don't have the need for a language substitute. Every living language can be expanded and gives space for experimenting. For me it is important to have something to say within each language. And if it serves me particularly well, I even do it with humor. A man must be exposed to comprehensibility. It's good to be able to be authenticated.

The space of the music is a utopia. But it only occurs in the staging - language is the link between this here and that over there. It is a precondition for not having a gap between art and life. Art is a part of life, one of its most beautiful parts, «inner blossoming» (Schwertsik). But it's not life. Nor its substitute.

Čovjek ili životinja?

Četiri artista - prava čovjeka - koji svoje točke žele izvesti maksimalno dobro i profitabilno, četiri životinje - takoreći čovjeka - koje sjede u svojim psihičkim kavezima, stoje između dva principa između kojih život treba donijeti odluku: između pesimizma koji vodi u cinizam i opravdava brutalnost kao nešto logično, i optimizma koji protiv toga može upotrijebiti samo snagu nade i strpljenja. Odnosno, između direktora cirkusa koji sve pozove u cirkusku arenu i potjera u borbu, gdje će po životinjskom principu odmah biti raskomadani, i male vjere koja djeluje doduše nemoćno, ali ipak magično: ona se ne da prepiliti, ona je, i to je njena malena pobjeda, mimo svake logike neuništiva nada u bolji svijet. A to je jedan od principa života.

Tako direktora cirkusa primjerice nalazimo u centrima moći, kapitalizma i konzumerizma, u kojima se ljudske slabosti iskorištavaju za manipulaciju čovjekom, dok se s druge strane mala vjera neograničeno pojavljuje u dječjim sobama, knjigama, umjetničkim djelima, među malim junacima svakodnevice, u ljubavnim pričama i neprofitnim organizacijama - među ljudima koji se poput Voltaireova *Candide*a jednostavno ne mogu ili ne žele naviknuti na zloču i glupost svijeta i koji grozote koje im se događaju ne uvježbavaju i ne oponašaju. Danas se općenito smatraju glupima oni koji se nisu pametno prilagodili tempu i tržišnim uvjetima u cirkuskoj areni. U neka se druga vremena upravo to smatralo bitkom ljudskosti - biti pametniji, obazriviji i sabraniji od životinskog instinkta od kojega smo potekli.

[Kristine Tornquist]

Human or animal?

Four artists - veritable humans - who want to perform their acts as skilfully and as profitably as they possibly can, and four animals - almost humans - who sit in their psychological cages, are positioned between two principles between which we must choose in life: pessimism that leads into cynicism and justifies brutality as something logical, and optimism that can use only the power of hope and patience to fight such attitudes. In other words, the choice is between a circus director that calls everyone into the circus arena and forces them into a fight which, according to the animal principle, will see them immediately dismembered, and a tiny faith that appears weak, but is also magical: it cannot be sawn in half, it is, and in this lies its small victory, an indestructible hope in a better world that opposes all logic. And that too is one of the principles of living.

The circus director is thus found in the centres of power, capitalism and consumerism, where human weaknesses are used to manipulate people, whereas the tiny faith appears without limitation in children's rooms, books, works of art, among little heroes of everyday living, in love stories and non-profit organizations, among people who, like Voltaire's Candide, simply cannot and will not get used to the meanness and stupidity of the world, and who do not plan and copy the horrible things that happen to them. Generally speaking, the idiots of the modern day are those who have not been smart enough to adapt to the tempo and the market conditions of the circus arena. In other times, it was precisely such an attitude that was considered the essence of humaneness - being smarter, more considerate and more thoughtful than the animal instinct that we originated from.
